SUSTAINING THE PUBLIC CREDIT.

One clause of the democratic platform at Cincinnati, pledges the party to the sustenance of the public credit, both "state and national."

The absurdity of such a pledge appears, whenever one contrasts it with what the party has done. We can only judge of what it is going to do by what it has done. It is hardly necessary for us to refresh the memories of our readers as to the action of the democratic party on the currency question for the past twelve or more years. With uniformly demanded the payment of the entire public debt in greenbacks.

Besides being an act of bad faith

door again quickly and went in search of my own room. Some one conducted me there, and I went to bed. The next day at dinner the Queen said to me, laughing, Do you know that you came into my room at midnight? 'What, madam, was it your Majesty's door that I opened?' 'Certain-Besides being an act of bad faith towards the nation's creditors, such a policy would have rendered the currency of the country worthless.

It would have been of no more

the paper worth the paper was a policy would have been of more than the paper was a policy would have been of no more laughing heartily.'

guessed that I had lost my way, and I finished by asking her permission, if ever I wrote my memoirs to relate how I had opened the door of the Queen of England's bedchamber at midnight when she was going to bed. She gave me permission in laughing heartily.' value than the paper upon which it is printed. It would have ruined the government and revolu-

the country. But the clause referred to be comes more absurd when taken in flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I who participated in that convention. I tried it, but my folly proved to be

45 Years Before the Public. or in part, after the democratic party came into power. It was so in Arkansas, Alabama, North Carolina, Louisiana, and it is virtually so in Tennessee and Virginia. For the past eleven years the democrats have had everything their own way in Tennessee. They had charge of every department of the state government-executive, legislative and judicial. The republicans have had no voice whatever in the state government. Has our credit as a state been sustained? The debt stands against neither the principal or interest is being paid. No effort is being made to pay it. The result is, our bonds have gone down, until now, if a man were to steal one of them of the denomination of one thousand dollars, he could'nt be convicted of petty larceny. If we found one of them laying on the street, face upwards, we would hardly stoop down to pick it up. They have only a nominal value, and in reality are worth nothing. And yet Tennessee democrats go to Cincinnati and take part in the adoption of a party platform in which the maintenance > planks. The outside world must know that our complaints of inability to pay are not well founded. It is known that we have one of the best states in the union. We have territory embracing about 45,000 square miles. We have a soil adapted to the production of almost every thing necessary to sustain life. Our climate is equal to any on the globe. We have inexhaustible mineral resources. And, with all these, we have those amongst us who

of state credit is made one of the

around whining about our poverty. Everybody knows that it is Steam Sash and Blind Factory, question of will and not ability. We have had liberal propositions from our creditors, but democratic legisa latures have neglected them with disdain. People at the north, who really favor the maintenance of the public credit, "state and national," will know just how much confidence to place in the professions of a set of politicians, who thus preach sound doctrine and practice miserable

> Soon after the Cincinnati convention it was absurdly claimed by some democratic politicians and newspaper men, that Gen. Grant Only Vegetable Compound that would support Gen. Hancock for acts directly upon the Liver, and (ircuit Court of the United States president. Of course no one believed it; but drowning men catch dice, Biliousness, Malaria, Cosat straws, and some of the overcredulous evidently took some comfort from it. But the little ray of comfort derived from that source has been ruthlessly dispelled. We publish elsewhere an order from Gen. Grant, as commander-in-chief of the "Boys in Blue," a political organization, devoted to the interests of the republican party. It will be seen that the general says: "The interests of the whole country, north and south, demand the success of the ticket headed by Garfield and Arthur. Under his direction, the "Boys in Blue" are to be thoroughly organized and they will be heard from in the campaign.

M. Ggizot at Windsor. From Galignani.

In 1840 M. Guizot was offered and acepted the Ambassadorship for London. From here he wrote long accounts to his children of the Lord Mayor's dipner, of Windsor Castle, and the British Mussum. He says, "I had two adventures at Windso. The first, I gained the prize at the Ascot races. Everybody who accompanies the Queen gives a sovereign, and draws a paper bearing the name of one of the horses to run. I drew Scrutari and he won the first prize. Twenty-three sovereigns for me. run. I drew Scrutari and he won the first prize. Twenty-three sovereigns for me, which served to pay for the Christmas hoxes I gave to the servants at the Castle.

"Here is my second, which will make you laugh; but don't laugh when anybody is present, or it might get in the newspapers, which would not please me at all. On Wednesday evening at Windsor, at half-past eleven, the Queen had retired: we remained half an hour longer talking. At mided half an hour longer talking. At mid-night I left to go to my apartment. I lost my way in the galleries and corridors of the Castle. I half opened a door, thinking t was mine, and perceived a woman sitting down half undresseed, and her chamber-maid standing near her. I shut the door again quickly and went in search of ly,' and she laughed, and I also. She guessed that I had lost my way, and I fin-
